BELTRAO AND GOSANO OUTSTANDING

LEUNG WING CHIU, WILSON AND ROWLANDS IMPRESS

(By "ROVER")

THE Charity socces game between a team representing the Rest of the Colony and the South China Athletic Association at Caroline Hill yesterday served but two useful purposes, and those were the providing of a few dollars to the Suiyuan Refugees Fund and the establishing, beyond a doubt, the claims of five players for the forthcoming Interport game against Shanghai.

The match was very poorly supported owing to the weather, and even the presence of Lee Wai-tong, football idol of China, did not attract the numbers that were expected. E. Strange, of the Club, came into the Rest team in place of South China "B" will be fielding a very strong side, and, playing at home, are likely to avenge their defeat of last week, when they went down by the only goal of the match, scored by Hughes in the second half. With Talbot playing up to form, the Chinese defenders will probably be given an anxious time.

The Navy are making several changes, Tippetts reappearing on the left-wing, while McLeod will be seen at inside-right. With the Recreio anxious to wipe out the memory of last week's debacle (they supplied most of the players for the Portugal team) a keen encounter should result.

K.C.C. CHALLENGE FOR CHAMPIONSHIP

(By "ADREM") very heavy Junior League cricket programme will be decided this afternoon when no less than six matches are on the programme. The Navy have only played one fixture to date and so little known of their League strength. In view of their showing in recent friendly matches, however, they should be in a position to field quite a powerful combination. The Police have done exception ally well so far, but I think a draw is the most likely result. The Hong Kong Cricket Club ? will meet the University at Pokfulam and should have no difficulty in securing the points. The LR-C. and Army "A" encounter should prove to be the most interesting of the afternoon. Fokker Looks Into The Future

HIS LIFE STURY

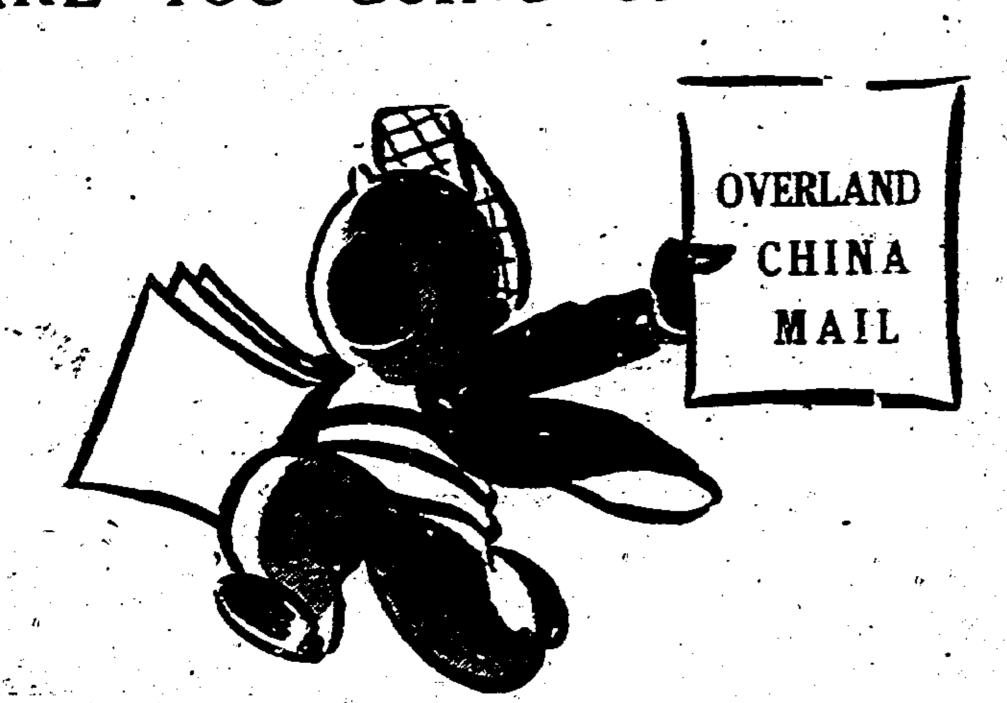

"Aviation has only just pecked its shell. The future will bring Band of the 2nd Battalion The carrying 100 passengers and more kind permission of Major W. E. B. We shall make airplanes so per- Dowling and Officers, will be given fect that technically speaking at the Peninsula Hotel next Sundisasters will become impossible day. Except for the possible mistakes by the human being who will operate these machines, sad faihires will belong to the past." That was the prediction made by Anthony Herman Gerard Fokker on June 7, the twenty-fifth anniversary of the day the German Aero Club issued his international pilot's license.

Some 30 years ago a high school boy apparently wasted his time making numerous model sirplanes with celluloid. The flights of the Wright brothers. Bleroit, and others in 1908 and 1909 attracted the attention of the whole world, and had so impressed young Tony Fokker that he neglected his school work. His teachers and parents were desperate because of his allabsorbing hobby of the celluloid toy planes.

Aviation Was His Hobby He had a bent for technical things; although theory interested him far less than the practical side. Once, when he was on holiday at Mainz on the Rhine, he discovered a school for motor engineering and simplane construction with a flying school attached. and he was soon enrolled as a pupil The school possessed only one airplane, and the fact that this machine came to an untimely end marks an epoch in young Fokker's

The loss of the school's airplane induced Mr. Fokker to build a machine himself according to his own ideas and based on the experience which he had acquired, when experimenting with his celluloid models. And so, in the winter of 1910-11 Mr. Fokker, assisted by two workmen, built his first real airplane, which agreed in principle with the models which his mother found in the attic and which she has preserved to this

The programme is as follows: March "A Bunch of Roses" 2. Overture, from Richard Wagner's "Tannkauser." "Tannhauser". Wagner's fift) onera was produced at Dresden in 1845. The overtone, which is or of the most celebrated works in existence, was first given in England at a Philharmonic concert is May 1855 under the direction of

Wagner himself, who conducted th

Society's concerts during the whole of that season. Like many other overtures, tha to "Tannhauser" is built up on melodies taken from the opera which it precedes, but in this case these folicy one another in such a manner that the overture forms musical picture, a resume in instrumental tones of the whole idea on which the drama is based.

Belonging to the second perio of Wagner's development as dramatic composer, it is the storof the fight between good and evi good being here represented by the pure Elizabeth and evil by the Godess Venus. INFANT PRODICY'S EDUCATION

The actual education of a specially gifted child is usually a problem the teacher has to solve, and often has to decide between keeping such a child in a class really below his true ability, promoting him to a class much above his level in age. Usually a compromise results. The right thing to do depends on individual circumstances. child compelled to do work much too easy for him is bored both by the work and the mediocre minds of his class-mates, while if promoted to a higher class where all the others are much older than he p.m. is, he will feel out of it because the bigger boys will not associate with him, and look down on him as a "swot." So instead of being merely bored he will now be un-

In America many schools, run special classes for gifted children where they are given opportunities for individual work, and the results have been very good.

Making Intellectual Snobs The parents on the other hand must at all costs avoid giving the child the impression that he is a second Einstein or Darwin, otherwise he will become an unbearable intellectual snob, than which nothing is more insufferable. Give him every chance to cultivate his talents by supplying him with suitable books, etc., but do not regard nim as a prize animal to be shown off at every opportunity.

Give him ample opportunity for companionship and play, and let his playmates be just ordinary healthy boys of ordinary intellect who will knock any ideas of intellectual superiority, out of him by their superiority at cricket and football. In this way he will not get too high an opinion of the value of his own intelligence, because it requires more than this to make a success of life, especially the ability to get on with one's fellow-men and to see the other man's point of view.

despite West's pass. -Why East elected to bid five hearts rather than double five diamonds was not disclosed by my correspondent. Five diamonds' certainly appears to be set, while the chance of making five hearts with a passing partner seems slight indeed. -West, with a void in the diamond suit, has shown great restraint throughout the bidding. His hand justifies a double raise, which he should have given long before. However, with no Aces whatever he shows great courage in undertaking a contract of six. Prebably with his spade length and freakishness of the hands disclosed through the bidding he feels reasonably certain that East is void of spades and that whatever outside strength he has is in the unbid club suit. The bid, however, is unsound double The slam was not enough. logically, and at worst North feels that he can at least cash the Ace of spades and the Ace of clubs. Played at five diamonds punished severely. At worst he would have been compelled to give up two trump tricks, two clubs and one heart, but a 450point penalty, after all, is rather large for a player who does not know that he is defending.

At the six-heart contract East had no trouble. He merely drew trumps and conceded the Ace of clubs to North ding difficult for his oppon-whose other two Aces were worthless to him.

FALSE ALARM EXCITEMENT IN CAINE ROAD

In answer to a fire alarm, which was given in Caine Road, an appliance from the Central Fire Station speeded through the streets at about 5.30 p.m. yesterday, only to find that its services were not necessary.

It appears that some of the residents of the building opposite the entrance of the Italian Convent in Caine Road were thrown into a panic when thick clouds of smoke were seen issuing from the kitchen on the ground floor.

As usual, police whistles were blown, while an unknown person, indiscreetly, went and pulled the fire ularm in the street.
